Joyner Library has responsibility for maintaining an archival copy of all East Carolina University theses and dissertations. For theses and dissertations published after the mandatory transition to electronic format (Spring 2010) the library acquires copies of all theses and dissertations in both electronic and microfiche form. The electronic copy is stored in the university’s institutional repository, and made available to users, subject to the distribution options selected by the author. The microfiche copy is available for use only within Special Collections.

For some theses and dissertations published prior to the mandatory transition to electronic format, Joyner Library retains circulating print copies in the general collections in addition to copies in the university archives. Damaged circulating print copies are not automatically replaced due to the existence of the university archives copies. Additional copies of some of these pre-2010 items are also retained and managed by Laupus Health Sciences Library.
